The Book of the Giants

By W. B. HENNING

ISAAC DE BEAUSOURE, the Huguenot author of one of the best books ever written on Manicheism (Histoire critique de Manichée et du Manichéisme, Amsterdam, 1734, 1739), was the one to make the only sound suggestions on the sources used by Mani for the compilation of his Book of the Giants: the Book of Enoch, and the Γραφὴ των Γιγάντων which Kenan, a great-grandson of Noah, discovered lying in a field (vol. i, 429, n. 6). The latter work has been identified by Alfarc (Les Écritures Manichéennes, ii, 32) with a book whose contents are briefly indicated in the Decretum Gelasianum, p. 54, ll. 298-9 (ed. Dobschütz): Liber de Ogia nomine gigante qui post diluvium cum dracone ab hereticis pugnasse perhibetur apocryphus. Of the Book of Enoch, which was composed in the Hebrew language in the second century B.C., only an Ethiopic version, a few Greek fragments, and some excerpts made by the Byzantine chronographer Georgius Syncellus survive. Mani, who could hardly read the Hebrew, must have used an Aramaic edition based directly on the Hebrew text (see below, Šhrmyzd). He quotes mainly from the first part, which Georgius S. (p. 45, Fl.-R.) calls "the first book of Enoch on the Egrēgoroi", but shows himself acquainted also with the subsequent chapters.

It is noteworthy that Mani, who was brought up and spent most of his life in a province of the Persian empire, and whose mother belonged to a famous Parthian family, did not make any use of the Iranian mythological tradition. There can no longer be any doubt that the Iranian names of Sām, Nariman, etc., that appear in the Persian and Sogdian versions of the Book of the Giants, did not figure in the original edition, written by Mani in the Syriac language. His disciples, who, it is well known, were in the habit of translating every word of a text (including the names of months, deities, etc.), see them also to "translate" the names of the giants. Thus Sām is merely the translation of Ŷhýa. However, they kept some of the original names (e.g. Šhrmyzd), and adapted some others (e.g. Wrwgd'd). 1

The story of the fallen angels and their giant sons needed little adaptation to be fitted into Mani's system. Of course, the heavenly origin of the Bēhā-Elīmīy of Genesis vi, 2, 4, the Epyρhpos, of the Book of Enoch, did not square with Mani's conviction that no evil could come from good. He therefore transformed them into "demons"; namely those demons that when the world was being constructed had been imprisoned in the skies under the supervision of the Rex Honoris. They rebelled and were recaptured, but two hundred of them escaped to the earth. Mani also used the term Epyρhpos (preserved in Copic, see texts L, M, P, S), or rather Ŷr in Aramaic (once in a Middle Persian fragment, text D), but in Eastern sources they are mostly referred to as "demons" (Pers. dywh, Parth. dyw'h in T 6, Sogd. dyw'n in G, H 17, K 7, cy'tyl in E, dyw'ZY yk'syd in H 16). 2

The puzzling clause of Genesis vi, 4: "The Nephilim were on the earth those days," was interpreted by Mani in this fashion: "when the Egrēgoroi descended, the animals, or proto-animals, were already in existence." Mani confused naf'ilim with nefāl (nafāl) = ēktroma: see Nöldeke, ZDMG., 43 (1889), 536, who rightly referred to the formula of abjuration (P. Gr., i, 1461) where the giants and the "abortions" are mentioned in one breath. In Manichæan parlance, "abortion" (cf. also MPers. bghng, Sogd. pš'q) is synonymous with "animal".

We are therefore left with the Gibbōrīn, understood by Mani as "giants". He probably used the equivalent Syriac word, gabbārē (gnbr), which his disciples translated as γιγανταζεις, al jabābirāh in Arabic, MPers. and Parthian kwh, Sogd. kwyšt = kawšt (Sing. qwy, kwy = kaw), cf. Sb.P.A.W., 1934, 30. In Sasanian times the words derived from the Avestan Kavi were generally understood as "giant"; see Benveniste, MO., xxvi, 214, and Polotsky in Mir.Man., iii, 901. Thus MPers. Parth. kwis freely used in Manichaean texts, e.g. of the Father of Light (M 40), of solar deities, of leading Manichæans (both in Mir.Man., iii), also of the First Man and Ahraman with reference to the First Battle (which therefore could have been described as a γιγαντομαχία), 3 p. 54. However, the word kwis applied only to men and such beings as were imagined anthropomorphous. Where one would translate γιγας as monster, the Iranian equivalent is mzn, Mazan. Thus the γιγας τυς θαλάσσης (Kephalaia, 113 and names), whose breathing operations are responsible for ebb and flow (cf. also Beruni, India, 203, 10-11), is called Mzn Ŷr (zyrhug) in Middle Persian (M 99, V 22-3). Accordingly, MPers. mzn (adj. and noun) and the related words, Pahl. māzan, māzanīg, Sogd. mznŷn dyw Av. māzainya- are should be rendered as "monster", or "gigantic, monstrous".

The Egrēgoroi and their giant progeny are fought and vanquished by four archangels: Raphael, Michael, Gabriel, and Istrael (Enoch, 10, 1; or: Uriel, or: Fanuel). In the Book of the Giants they are called "the four angels". They are frequently invoked by name in Manichaean prayers (e.g. M 4 d 19, f 6; M 20), as Rwp'yil, Myx'yil, Gbr'yil, and Sryl (= Istrael).

There were no details about individual feats of the giants in the Book of Enoch. Mani filled the gap with the help of the above-mentioned Liber de Ogia nomine gigante. This Ogius has been identified with Og of Bashan, who according to late sources lived five thousand years and managed to survive the Deluge, thanks to his giant size. But possibly stories that primarily appertained to Ogius were transferred to the better known Og, owing to the resemblance of their names. The name of Ogius is šhr (or: Šhr) in the Manichaean fragments, and this spelling is presumably more correct than that of Ogius. Og (šhr) indubitably would appear as šhg or: Šhr. Since Mani took Šhr' from an Aramaic text, the ending of Ogius cannot be regarded as a Greek addition.

Ogias fought with a draco, and so did Ohya; his enemy was the Leviathan (text N). Ohya and his brother Ahya were the sons of Šhmyźď (text H), i.e. Šµyḏaz; the chief of the Egrégoroi in the Book of Enoch; hence, Šµyḏaz is transcription of šhm- (or šhm ?). In the Persian edition of the Kawān Ohya and Ahya are "translated" as Sām and Narīmān, but the original names are kept in one passage (A 60). The translator did well to choose Sām-Krsāsp, both with regard to Ogias' longevity (Sām is one of the "immortals") and to his fight with the dragon (Sām is a famous dragon-killer). In the Sogdian text p. 56 fragments the name of Sām is spelt Šhm = Sāhm, as it is often in Pahlavi (Šhm; beside Šm); Tabari has Šhm2 cf. Christensen, Kayanides, p. 130. Sāhm's brother is Pāt-Sāhm. This name may have been invented by the Sogdian translator in order to keep the names of the brothers resembling each other. Narīmān was evidently not known in Sogdiana as a brother of Sām. According to the Book of the Giants, the main preoccupation of Sām-Sāhm was his quarrel the giant Māhawai, the son of Virōgdād, who was one of the twenty ers of the Egrégoroi.

The Book of the Giants was published in not less than six or seven languages. From the original Syriac the Greek and Middle Persian versions were made. The Sogdian edition was probably derived from the Middle Persian, the Uygur from the Sogdian. There is no trace of a Parthian text. The book may have existed in Coptic. The presence of names such as Sām and Narīmān in the Arabic version proves that it had been translated from the Middle Persian. To the few surviving fragments (texts A-G) I have added two excerpts, the more important of which (H) probably derives from a Syriac epitome of the book. Naturally, Manichæan authors quoted the book frequently, but there is only one direct citation by a non-Manichæan writer (text O). With the exception of text O, all the passages referring to the Book of the Giants (texts J-T) go back to Syriac writings (apparently). They are, therefore, to be treated as quotations from the Syriac edition. E.g. the Parthian text N is not the product of a Parthian writer who might have employed a Parthian version of the book, but was translated from a Syriac treatise whose author cited the Syriac text.

In their journey across Central Asia the stories of the Book of the Giants were influenced by local traditions. Thus, the translation of Ohya as Sām had in its train the introduction of myths appertaining to that Iranian hero; this explains the "immortality" of Sā(h)m according to text l. The country of Aryan-Vēžan = Aryan Vaēǰah, in text G (26), is a similar innovation. The "Kögmān mountains" in text B may reflect the "Mount Hermon". The progeny of the fallen angels was confined in thirty-six towns (text S). Owing to the introduction of the Mount Sumeru, this number was changed p. 56 (in Sogdiana) to thirty-two (text G, 22): "the heaven of Indra . . . is situated between the four peaks (cf. G 21) of the Meru, and consists of thirty-two cities of devas" (Eittel, Handb. Chinese Buddhism, 148, on Trayastriṃšat).

In the translation parentheses are employed for explanatory remarks.

FRAGMENTS OF THE KAWĀN

A. Middle-Persian

M 101, a to n, and M 911, fifteen fragments of a book, throughout small pieces from the centre of the pages. It has proved impossible, so far, to re-establish the original order of the pages. On purely technical grounds (size of the fragments, appearance of the margins, relative position of tears, stains, etc.), I at first assumed the following sequence: c-j-k-g-i-c-e-b-h-f-a-d-m-M 911-n. Being unable to estimate the cogency of these technical reasons now, I have decided to change the order of the first six fragments in the following way: c-j-l-k-g-i, in view of their contents.

Unfortunately we do not know in what order Mani had told the story of the giants. The task of finding the original order is made still more difficult by the fact that besides the Kawān the book contained one or two more treatises, namely: (1) Parables referring to the Hearers, and possibly (2) a discourse on the Five Elements (here (1) = lines 160 to the end, and (2) = lines 112-159). The only fragments that undoubtedly belonged to the Kawān are c-j-l-k-g-i, while the position of the fragments e-b-h is particularly doubtful. It must be borne in mind that whole folios may be missing between apparently successive pages. In order to enable the reader to judge for himself, all the fragments (including the parables) are published here. The text is based on a copy I made nearly ten years ago (referred to in the notes as: Copy); a revision is not possible under the present circumstances.

And the story about the Great Fire: like unto (the way in which) the Fire, with powerful wrath, swallows this world and enjoys it; like unto (the way in which) this fire that is in the body, swallows the exterior fire that is (lit. comes) in fruit and food, and enjoys it. Again, like unto (the story in which) two brothers who found a treasure, and a pursuer lacerated each other, and they died; like unto (the fight in which) Ohya, Lewyātīn (= Leviathan), and Raphael lacerated each other, and they vanished; like unto (the story in which) a lion cub, a calf in a wood (or: on a meadow), and a fox lacerated each other, [and they vanished, or: died]. 2 See Charles, The Book of Enoch, 2nd ed., 1912. For the Greek fragments (and Georgius S.) the edition by Flemming and Radermacher ( = Fl.-R.) is quoted here. For Mani's use of the Enoch literature see my papers in Sb.P.A.W., 1934, 27-32, and in ZDMG., 90, 2-4.

3 See below A 86-94, and compare G 19-21 with Enoch 67, 4, and G 38 with Enoch 17, 1; 21, 7; 54, 6; 67, 4-13. On chaps. 72 sqq. see Sb.P.A.W., 1934, 32.

4 Namely the Kamsarakan-k' (mentioned often in the Armenian history of the fourth century) who claimed descent from the royal house of the Arsacids. This is clear from the Chinese-Manichaean text that preceded the Fragment Pelliot, now printed in the Taishō Tridåka as No. 2141a, vol. 54, p. 1280A, but litherto untranslated: "He was born in the country of Sūlin (= Babylonia), in the royal abode of B'ud-tiei (= Patī-g), by his wife Muān-jām (= Maryam) of the family of Kīm-sät-g'ion (= Kamsar(a)gān)." The name Kāpcorra in the Byzantine formula of abjuration (Migne, Patr. Gr., i, 1468) may be corrupted from Kamsar. Thus there is a grain of truth in the assertion in the K. al-Fihrist, 327, 31, that Mani's mother had belonged to the Arsacid house; ibid., Maryam (ed., marmaryam) is given as one of her names.—It is not proposed to discuss the origin of Mani's father here.

5 I have abandoned my earlier opinion on this point (ZDMG., 90, 4) which was based on insufficient material. The important Sogdian fragment, text H, was not then known to me.

2 Cf. also Parthian bgpwrhr, Sogd. bīpšyft, lit. "sons of God" = angels (also fem. Sogd. bīpwyśf). Thus bgpwrh has a double meaning in Parthian, it being (Sogd. bīpwṛ) also the translation of Chin. T'ien-tzŭ, or rather of Skt. devaputra.

3 Herein he differed from the common interpretation of the passage (Nephilim = giants), shared also by the authors of the Book of Enoch.

4 M 41: br q'rc'h w źmbg 'stft cy whrmyzdbg qyr'd dyw'h: dwq'wh [w] dwynwh.
This word, in the anti-Manichean book by Alexander Lycopolitanus, p. 8, 10, ed. Brinkmann, refers neither to the Manich. "First Battle", nor to Mani's Book of the Giants, as Cumont, Rech., i, 3; ii, 160 sq., erroneously states. Cumont goes so far as to say that in the quoted passage Alexander had given a summary of Mani's work, and Benveniste, MO., xxvi, 213, has repeated this statement. In fact, Alexander says that experts in Greek mythology might quote, from p. 54 the Greek poets, the Greek γιγαντομαχία, as a parallel to the Manich. doctrine of the rising by the Hyle against God. In ch. 25 (p. 37, 13 sqq.) Alexander explains that such poetical fables about giants could not be regarded as a satisfactory parallel, because they were myths and meant to be understood as allegories. He then (37, 17) quotes the story of Genesis vi, 2-4, which he provides with an allegorical explanation. But he ascribes it to the History of the Jews without even mentioning the Book of the Giants. This shows conclusively that he had no knowledge of Mani's book.

Jackson, Researches, 37, 67 sq., has "poisonous mass"; cf. OLZ., 1934, 752.

Hence the comparative mzn (e.g. Mir.Man., i) and the superlative Pahl. mżan-tum (e.g. Dd., p. 118, 12 ed. Anklesaria).

Clearly to be derived from Av. mzan- "greatness". Cf. also Jackson, loc. cit., on mzn. Hence, the first part of the name of Mázandarān probably = "gigantic".

Thus Dobschütz, Decret. Gelas., p. 305.

For example, Men.Khr., 68, 12; 69, 12, ed. Andreas; Pahl. Yasna, 9, 10 (p. 71, 19).

Shm, of course, transcribes Shm, not Sm.

MPers. mhw C 7, with suff. mhw-c A 19, Sogd. mhw C 15 ( = Wrogedd oylī in B). Hardy = Māhōi (as suggested ZDMG., 90, 4), for the ending -ōi was pronounced -ōi also in the third century (cf. e.g. wyr = Wērō in the inscription of Shapur, line 34). Furthermore, there was no Māhōi among the heroes of the Iranian epos (M. is well known as the name of the governor of Marv at the time of the last Yezdegerd). More likely Māhawai was a non-Iranian name and figured already in the Aramaic edition of the Kawān; it may have been adapted to Persian. Cf. Mhwyl, Genesis, iv, 18?

But see Mir.Man., iii, 858 (b 134 sqq.).

The children of the Egrēgoroi share with the inhabitants of Aryan Vaēǰah the distinction of being regarded as the inventors (or first users) of the arts and crafts. For the spelling of Aryān-Vēžan see also Appendix, text U. It is not clear whether Yima (text V) had been given a place in the Sogdian Kawān. YmyĪ, i.e. Imī, is the correct Sogdian form of the name.

This system of notation has been used also in my book Sogdica, and in my paper in BSOS., X, pp. 941 sqq. The various interputation marks are uniformly represented by oo here.

But possibly Frg. i should occupy the first place; see below, notes on lines 95-111.

The texts B and C (Uygur and Sogdian) could be inserted here (or hereabouts).

Probably one of the twenty "decarchs" (Enoch 6, 7), viz. No. 4 Kokabiel =  водырј in the Greek fragments, and  водырј apud Syncellus.

This also could be a "decarch", Arakib- ⍺αρακιήλ, or Aramiel- ˈραριήλ.

Incomplete name.

Cf. Enoch 7, 5.

Btg might be appellative, = "a board". This would fit in three of the passages, but hardly in the fourth.

Evidently this is the dream that Enoch reads in the fragment M 625c ( = Text D, below), which therefore probably belonged to the Kawān. It should be inserted here.

Here (or hereabouts) the texts E and F should be entered, both of which deal with the judgment on the fallen angels. Text F approximates to Enoch, ch. 10 (pronouncement of the judgment by God), while Text E is nearer to Enoch, ch. 13 (communication of the judgment the angels by Enoch).

= Enoch, 12, 4-5: εἰπε τοῖς ἐγγηγόροις . . . . οὐκ ἔσται ύμῖν εἰρήνη.
The Book of the Giants

2 = Enoch, 13, 1-2: ὃ δὲ Ἔνωχ . . . οὕτω . . . οὕτω ἦσσαι σοι εἰρήνη κρίμα μέγα ἐξήλθεν κατά σοῦ δέθαι σε . . . περὶ . . . τῆς ἀδικίας καὶ τῆς ἀμαρίτας κλ.

4 = Enoch, 14, 6: ἵδε τὴν ἀπώλειαν τῶν ἴδιῶν ἴμων.

5 = Syncellus, pp. 44-5 Fl.-R. (ad cap. xvi), cf. Genesis, vi. 3. ἀπολούνται οἱ ἄγαπητοι ἴμων . . . ὅτι πάσας αἱ ἡμέραις ζωῆς αὐτῶν ἀπὸ τοῦ ἱδίου οὐ μὴ ἔσονται πλέον τῶν ἕκαστον εἰκοσίαν ἔτων.

6 In Jewish Persian τνε更多精彩 is "ram" (Lagarde, Pers. Stud., 73), but in the dialect of Rîsahr nr. Bushire (according to the notes made on this dialect by Andreas about seventy years ago) ἰτστάρ is "a young she-goat". See JRAS., 1942, 248. [τνε, ls. 11, ler. 51 = Hebr. 'attūd, probably understood as "he-goat".]

7 These lines evidently refer to the promise of peace and plenty that concludes the divine judgment in Enoch, 10. Hence = "each pair of those animals shall have two hundred young"?

8 sārītn: cf. DkM. 487 apu.-488, 3, "when they provoke (sārēn-) him he does not get irritated (sār- and better, sārīh-)." GrBd. 5, 8, "if you do not provoke, or instigate (sārēn-) a fight" (differently Nyberg, ii, 202). sār-, if from sared-(Skt. sārdh-), is presumably the transitive to sārdhny (from sārdh-ya- according to Bartholomae), cf. NGGW., 1932, 215, n. 3.

10 ἢ τῷ τῇ ὄρη = taī from taī (cf. GGA., 1935, 18), is ambiguous: (1) sharp instrument, (2) burning, glow, brightness, sunrays, etc. So also is τὕζγ: (1) sharpness, (2) speed. One could also restore τῦ[γ]ρ.

11 Lit. "but the Wing(s) that (is, are) with him." The curious expression was chosen probably on account of the rhythm. For the same reason byc is employed in the place of ἂν in line 73.

12 Lit. "beats".

13 ἄμαρτην is obviously different from ἄμαρτῃ (on which see BSOS., IX, 81), and possibly derived from ἄμαρτ-, cf. ἄμπη- "to be born" from ἄμπτη "to be born". ἄμαρτην- is met with in W.-L., ii, 558, p. 62 Ri 25, "blessed chief who stands (ἄμαρτην?) as the sign of the Light Gods." Lentz has ἄμαρτην, but without having seen the manuscript one may presume a misreading (cf. ibid., R i l, Lentz: ἄμαρτην, but probably πρ[τῆρ], R i 2, Lentz: π.δτ, but probably πρ[τῆ], ibid., R ii 22, Lentz: p.δτ, but probably πρ[τ]; for further cases see OLZ., 1934, 10).

p. 62

1 St. John, 13, 18.

2 phrystn: phryst = Parth. πρξῆν: πνξῆν (cf. Av. pānhaēza-, Sogd. pr-γγζ; Parth. ρξῆτ; MPers. χστ) is mostly "to stand around, to be about, versant", sometimes "to stand around for the purpose of looking after someone" = "serve, nurse, protect", often merely "to be". phryst-: to stand off, to abstain is presumably different (para-haēza-).

3 The series of visions in which Enoch sees the arrangements for the punishment of the fallen angels, etc., and of "the kings and the Mighty" (chaps. xvii sqq.), follows immediately upon the announcement of the divine judgment. Hence, frgg. κ-γ must be placed after frg. 1. Text G (below), which describes, the execution of the divine order, could perhaps be inserted here.

4 It is difficult to decide whether this fragment should be placed at the end or at the beginning of the book. The 400,000 Righteous may have perished when the Egrēgoroi descended to the earth. The "choosing of beautiful women", etc., strongly suggests the misbehaviour of the Egrēgoroi on their arrival upon the earth. The hard labour imposed on the Mesenians and other nations may be due to the insatiable needs of their giant progeny (Enoch, 7, 2 sqq.). On the other hand, "fire, naphtha, and brimstone" are only mentioned as the weapons with which the archangels overcame the Egrēgoroi, after a prolonged and heavy fight (Text G, 38), and the 400,000 Righteous may well have been the innocent non-combatant victims of this battle which may have had a demoralizing effect even upon the electae. To clear up the debris the archangels would naturally commandeer the men. We do not know whether Mani believed Enoch to have been moved out of sight (ἦλημφθη Enoch, 12, 1) before the Egrēgoroi appeared, or before they were punished.

1 py(y) always = nerves, sinews (not "fat" as in Mir.Man., i, etc., as alternative rendering). It is equivalent to nerfs (Chavannes-Pelliot, Traité Man., 323 [528/9]), Uygur singir (T.M., iii, 18/9), Capt. = Sehne (Keph., 96, etc.), Sogd. pōδω (unpubl.). Cf. also GrBd., 196, 4, where Goetz, ZfT., ii, 70, wrongly has "fat." MPers. pai = NPers. pai = Pashto pala = Sogd. pōδω (not Av. pōδw-).

2 Hardly "to". Cf. Cumont, Rech., i, 49, and my paper NGGW., 1932, 224.
3 Or: over the Just God, sun and moon, the (or: his) two flames. The "Just God" is the Messenger (not = bgrštygr; i.e. Zrwān).

So also the pious Hearer, in times of persecution and of free exercise (lit. open-mindedness), in good and bad days, under the eyes of the Elect or out of their sight,—he is constant in his charity and faith." Although the word bns is incomplete in both passages, its restoration is practically a certainty.

7 Possibly the parable of St. Mark, iv, 3 sqq.

8 BSOS., IX, 86.

p. 64

1 An elaborate version of this parable is found in M 221 R 9-23: u ntwšgd ky hnh nwgh ṳ wūwūydng ṳ wyyd, ṳ w mšš c[ ] 'skbg myrđ āl], dw t y nyq ždh wy, ṳ w ṳ wūydr ṳ byr hwcyhr hy. ṳ w hnh myrd y 'skbg hwcyhrhyḥ y 'w qnycxwsw dwtr prg'myṛḥ cy byr hcohy[ ] [ ]tly. ṳ wy ṳ dw t y hwcyhr [ ] [ ]tly. ṳ w šḥ hndnymn [qynydy] ṳ šḥ wy qncyg ps[nasy?] ṳ ṳ w ṳ wūydr nṣy[y]. ṳ[s] [ ] pwš[c] byyš žynd[ ] pwswy y[ ] āl]'y myrd y 'skbg dwtr ž'd (remainder missing). That poor man fosters the beauty of that girl, her daughter, for she is very beautiful. And that beautiful daughter, he presents her to the king. The king approves of her, and puts her into his harem. He has [several] sons by her. The sons that were born to that poor man's daughter . . . . . Throughout the story the parabolic optative is in use.

2 For a similar parable see below, lines 258 sqq.

3 zyyg: this word, hitherto unexplained, occurs in the Štbaḥragān (M 470 V 14, spelt zyg). The sinners, roasting in hell, see the Righteous enjoying the New Paradise, and ask them: . . . wmn . . . zygy dwṣt dydw [w ] ṳ y mn swcyw nswcw [dyw]" . . . put a rope (or: lifeline) in our hands and rescue us from this conflagration". Cf. Pahl., Pers. zīg, Nyberg, Mazd. Kal., 68.

4 Possibly "weapons".

5 Cf. Kephalaia, 192/3.

6 Cf. āḥit-ġar-ān below, F 43/4. For a discussion of āḥit see Zaehner; BSOS., IX, 315 sq. Perhaps one can understand Av. āāhit as "something that causes shame", hence "stain", etc. In that case Anāhitā could be compared to Apsaras. As regards NPers. xpret, mentioned by Zaehner, this may be connected with Sogd. yyrk "foolish". The word in DkM, 205/, is not necessarily hṛyγ-gwn (thus Zaehner, ibid., 312). It might be hyl- = Pashto xer "ashen, grey, etc." p. 65

1 Cf. supra, lines 206-212.

2 On boγuq see Bang, loc. cit., p. 15, who has: "the door of the closed (locked) sun." Acc. to Enoch, chaps. 72 sqq., there are 180 doors in the east one of which is opened each morning for the sun to pass through the idea, familiar also from Pahlavi books, is of Babylonian origin.

1 murzdān is "persecute, harass", not "show pity" as hitherto translated (S 9; Mir.Man., ii; W.-L., ii, 556, r 6).

2 ghwd (Mir.Man., ii), ghwdg (Mir.Man., i), ghwn (ZII, ix, 183, 27): the derivation of these words from vi + hū by Schaeder, Sb.P.A.W., 1935, 492, n. 3, is based on the translation I had given; this translation, however, was based on nothing but this selfsame etymology.

The Book of the Giants

The name is possibly to be restored in Türk. Man., iii, p. 39, No. 22, R 5, where wy.t'δlp was read by LeCoq.

4 Presumably the number of years supposed to have passed from the time of Enoch to the beginning of the reign of Vištāsp. The date for Enoch was probably calculated with the help of the Jewish world-era, or the mundane era of Alexandria (beginning 5493 B.C.), or by counting backwards from the Deluge. Taking 3237 B.C. (but 3251 B.C. according to the Coptic chronology) as the date of the Deluge (see S. H. Taqizadeh, BSOS., X, 122, under c), and adding 669 (= from Enoch's death to the Deluge according to the Hebrew Genesis), and subtracting the number in our fragment, 3,288 (?) from 3,237 + 669 = 3,906, the resulting date, 618 B.C., agrees perfectly with the traditional Zoroastrian date for the beginning of Vištāsp's reign (258 + 30 years before Alexander's conquest of Persia, 330 B.C.; cf. Taqizadeh, ibid., 127 sq.). From this one may infer that the famous date for Zoroaster: "258 years before Alexander" was known to Mani (Nyberg, Ref. Alt. Iran, 32 sqq., thinks it was invented towards the beginning of the fifth century).

5 In quoting this text in ZDMG., 90, p. 5, I took wyn for what it seemed to be, viz. Vēžan. But as the appearance of Bēžan in connection with Viśāspa is incomprehensible, I have now restored [ṛy]ṛn-wṛjn, see above, G 26.

8 šyrm is a karmadhāraya, = acclamation(s), cheering, cf. e.g. Rustam frg. (P 13, 5) prwRBkwšyrmn "with loud cheers"; it should not be confused with the bahuvrīhi šyrmk "well-reputed, famous" (e.g. Reichelt, ii, 68, 9; šyrm, ibid., 61, 2; cf. BBB., 91, on a 11). But šyrm is also "(good) fame", see e.g. V.J., 156, 168, 1139.
